[Staff Correspondence]
LONDON, Nov. 1 (by Mail). — The
"Koelniache Zeitung" (Cologne Gazette) of October 10 carried an article on the "Situation in Argentina." The article, which is dated from the Swiss frontier, voices the opinion that Argentina will not take an active part in the war against Germany because three-fourths of the officers of her army are naturalized Germans. The writer says:
"An Argentinian diplomat discusses in this city since the funeral of Senator Quay a decade ago. More than 300 policemen were required to handle the crowds who were unable to gain admittance to the Cathedral of Stx. Peter and Paul, where solemn requirem mass was celebrated.

rupt flight from the city Dwiggins, head of the New York agency of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company, of Des Moines, Iowa, came face to face with his wife, who had aided the authorities in every way in his capture.

Dramatic in the extreme was the meeting between the two—the stalwart, sullen fugitive, a man of middle age, bald, self-possessed, and the slight woman, gray-haired, gentle, who had given him up "as a matter of simple justice."

Dwiggins made the startling statement to Assistant District Attorney Edward S. Brogan that there was a solutely no shortage in his accounts as far as the second Liberty Loan was concerned. It was during the second loan campaign that Dwiggins operated the "United States Government Liberty Loan Club" plan whereby 6,000 small subscribers are alleged to have been fleeced.

Dwiggins Tells of Assets

According to Brogan, Dwiggins declared he had $89,000 in cash and bonds available to meet his liabilities. Of this amount, $34,000 worth of bands, he said, reposed in his office safe, $20,000 additional in bonds was in a safe deposit vault in the Chatham and Phænix Bank building and $35,000 was divided among four accounts—two in the Guaranty Trust Company (one in the name of Helen Dwiggins) and deposits in the Irving National and National City banks.

"This money will account for every penny subscribed on the second loan", Dwiggins persisted. "There should not be any shortage whatever on it. All the money is on hand to cover the second loan in full."

"I want you to tell everything you know. I want you to make right all the wrongs you have done, to see that not one of the poor people who trusted you with money loses a cent." Dwiggins, during the course of this conversation, made several angry replies, and appeared to be berating his wife for some step she had taken.
